The U.S. Plan to End Gender-Based Violence

By: Danielle Baron

Blog: Acknowledging U.S. Plan to End Gender Based Violence

This month, we published a new blog post written by our summer intern Danielle Baron discussing the release of the U.S. National Plan to End Gender-Based Violence. This comprehensive plan, established by the White House Gender Policy Council, focuses on prevention, support, justice, and data to address various forms of gender-based violence, including human trafficking.

Highlighted is the importance of survivor-centered and trauma-informed services in this crucial initiative. Amara Legal Center is proud to uplift the release of this plan and we maintain our belief that together we can take important steps to end gender-based violence. ### The E-Learning Trafficking Education Collaboration - Seeking Consultants

Amara Legal Center is excited to announce that we are still accepting collaborations for creating virtual training modules for medical professionals, law enforcement, and legal service providers to learn how to identify sex trafficking survivors and the legal issues they face.

We continue to encourage survivors, medical professionals, and law enforcement personnel to contribute as consultants during the development of our training curricula and virtual modules.

Your expertise and insights are valuable in shaping this important initiative.

If you have experience in any of these fields and share our passion for combating sex trafficking, we encourage you to get in touch with Keith Pollard, our Program Coordinator. He can be reached at keith.pollard@amaralegal.org.

Please don't hesitate to reach out to learn more about how you can contribute.
